

The College of Letters and Science Honors Program presents:

Coffee

Concepts

...an interactive seminar series

Imagine college with...

-No exams.

-No studying.

-No prerequisites.

-No grades.

- One session, one time, that starts late enough not to set an alarm and ends early enough to make the downtown scene.
- A chance to sip coffee and explore modern ideas with some of our University's best minds and favorite personalities.
- The essence of education. The true joy of learning.

Isn't this the college experience you were hoping for?

Join us for Coffee & Concepts, an interactive seminar series with UCSB professors. Information for the next event in this series is below. Don't miss out on an opportunity to meet professors and get a glimpse of what their work is about. Questions? Contact Allison Stuart (shcblue@LTSC.ucsb.edu).

THE EXPLORATION OF IDENTITY – PERSONAL, CULTURAL, FAMILIAL, SEXUAL

with Professor Kip Fulbeck

The exploration of identity - personal, cultural, familial, sexual - continues to be a focus of contemporary artists. Examining how we create and recreate our internal and external selves allows us to better understand our interactions in personal, social and political arenas. In this interactive workshop, students will view work by various filmmakers, video artists and performers, and engage in lively discussions pertinent to their phase in life.

Tuesday, February 22, 3:30-5:30 p.m.

UCen Mission Room (on the main level)

This will be the last seminar during winter quarter. Watch for information on more seminars in the spring, when Coffee and Concepts continues!
